This is not a comprehensive list of basic techniques for Hapkido students. However, by the time students reach black belt, all students are expected to be able to apply any of the above techniques in a variety of different situations, and know which techniques are easily applicable to a given situation. In a similar fashion, students will be expected to be able to adjust the above techniques to fit situational imperatives, angles, and force levels.

It should be noted here that for lower rank students, the above list might be handy in terms of thinking about self-defense applications or practicals responses for tests. However, this should not blind the student to other applications of techniques such as wrist releases, takedowns, or any one of the many other technique categories practiced in class.
